REPORT FOR 1899

The Training School Committee of the Massachusetts General Hospital Training School for Nurses present a Report from the year 1896, when the management of the Training School was assumed by the Trustees of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

The name was changed from Boston Training School for Nurses to Massachusetts General Hospital Training School for Nurses.

After the death of Mrs. Raemisch, Miss Sandahl was appointed teacher of massage. Miss Boland continued as teacher of cooking. It had been arranged before the change in management that the pupils should receive their cooking instruction in the Hospital kitchen.

During the summer of 1898, when tents were used for the soldiers, graduate nurses were engaged who lived outside the Hospital.

Miss Maria B. Brown, Superintendent of Training School, resigned July 1, 1899, and Miss Pauline L. Dolliver was appointed to succeed her.

For the coming year the Lecture Course has been revised, a separate series of lectures being given for the senior and junior classes.

The term of probation has been increased from one to two months, exclusive of the twenty-four months of training, and the money allowance to pupils has been reduced to six dollars per month.
